SPEAKER TESTIMONIAL

"In 2018, as co-chair of the planning committee for the North Carolina Association of Certified Public Accountants (NCACPA)'s Professional Women's Conference, we selected Angela's proposal to speak on Impostor Syndrome. Our conference is attended by busy female CPAs who are looking for strong presenters with actionable topics. We were very happy with Angela's presentation. Her delivery was engaging, her delivery was outstanding and most of all she offered practical advice to our attendees. Angela included multimedia in her presentation, engaged the audience in discussion questions and overall provided an exceptional learning environment. Her topic was one of the highest demanded and she did not disappoint. She received excellent student valuation scores and was asked back to speak at our 2019 conference. We can't wait to have Angela back to share her wisdom from years of leading as a female in a male-dominated leadership environment."

WRITING

ANGELA'S BOOK:

Woman on Top: Lead Like a Lady Boss

A book for lady leaders who want to increase their effectiveness, snuff out the workplace drama, and passionately inspire their staff.

Full of practical advice, real-life stories from the leadership front line and strategic ways of managing a team, Woman On Top: Lead Like A Lady Boss will accelerate you into becoming an inspiring leader.

Can you imagine firing your first employee in your first 30 days as a newly promoted manager?

Imagine sitting in the boss's seat, with sweaty palms and a dry mouth, trying to find the words to end someone's employment while still unsure of your ability to have a crucial conversation and lead a team?

That is the predicament that Angela Hosking, leader, speaker, coach and author of Woman on Top: Lead Like a Lady Boss found herself in along with a whole host of other uncomfortable challenges as she made the transition from employee to boss. No leadership book, class on conflict resolution or HR manual had prepared her for the true reality check of managing people. In fact, most of the leadership books she had read (and had read plenty of) were written about lofty leadership theories and the transformational process of inspiring a team.

What she wanted was a down and dirty manual of what to expect when suddenly being bestowed the title of Boss.

And she wanted it from a woman's perspective.

Why? Because, let's be honest, even though the 2015 Department of Labor Statistics Report shows that 39.2 percent of professional managers are women (as much as 73.7 percent in medical and health services), most of the leadership books she had to choose from were written by men.

Angela is on a mission to share the wisdom and her experience that women live differently and lead differently. Angela believes there are inherent characteristics in the way women and men build relationships, share communication and cultivate trust. Whether biological or societal, these differences can be advantages that a Lady Boss brings to the table. Women do not need to lead like men to be successful.

DORIE CLARK, Author of Reinventing You and Stand Out, and adjunct professor, Duke University Fuqua School of Business

"Not only is Woman on Top: Lead Like a Lady Boss jam-packed with practical leadership tactics, Angela includes crucial guidance on developing a Lady Boss Tribe at work, overcoming feelings of Imposter Syndrome, and day-to-day practical advice on how to confidently pull your chair up to the leadership table."

SALLY HUBBARD, Antitrust Expert, Investigative Journalist and Podcast Host, "Women Killing It"

"I'm so happy to finally see a book on leadership from a female perspective! How I wish I had this guidance when I was in a corporate management role! Even now, in my entrepreneurial role, I can apply these same tactics with my team members, my vendors and in my tribe. I have no doubt that the practical leadership tactics, paired up with personal stories and concrete action items, will make a huge difference in helping women leaders step into success!"
